QUEEN MIMI...of the House of Fuller

Miss Nellie Fuller's relatives form a long line of royalty in the Memphis Cotton Carnival. Family participation in the cotton industry covers four generations of planters and the royal lineage dates back to 1832 when her great uncle, J. P. Norfleet served as King.

The Virginia born queen of the 1978 Cotton Carnival was Lillian Manning of Memphis. Queen's Club in 1975. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Thompson Miller of 4250 Hawthorne Lane, are members of Ochs Scott Society.

Queen Mimi is a sister at the University of Alabama where she is majoring in Education, specializing in early childhood development. She attended The Methodist School and the Memphis Commercial School in Memphis. She has among her club interests and work, such as the service as a special officer, Ladiesman, Lin. Duke, Junior Cellist, Girls' Power Club and King Daughters. She is a member of Delta Delta Delta Sorority at Alabama where she is house president. Queen Mimi is a member of Second Presbyterian Church in Memphis.

Her mother is the former Miss Daisy Daniels of Annapolis, Md. Her maternal grandparents in 1916, held the title of Memphis and grandmothers to Mrs. Isaac Foster Daniels, former Memphis, wife of Capt. Isaac Foster Daniels of Gadsden, Ala.

It is noted in J. P. Norfleet, Queen Mimi has three sisters who have served as Carnival queens, B. Verne Norfleet, 1946 (and) president in 1952 Frank M. Norfleet, 1949 King and Elmer Turner Gibbs 1951 queen. Her godmother, Mrs. Norfleet Turner, is a former Queen of Memphis. The 1978 queen's lineage parents listed her as an active person.
